OUR SATURDAY NIGHT.

There is a short phrase of but two words in use at the front today that contains perhaps more of the noble, more of the sublime, than any other phrase of all time. It is but a simple phrase—Carry On—but it contains more real patriotism, more idea of self-sacrifice, and more idealism, than the entire English language put together.

In the cold gray dawn on the battlefield, through the rising mists, the captain gathers his men about him and leads the charge across the grim desolation of No Man's Land. But when, half way across that expanse, a bullet lays him low does he stop then to call for the stretcher-bearers? No, he turns to his first lieutenant, "Mr. Smith, Sir," he says, "Carry on!" And when a few yards farther on Fate overtakes Mr. Smith, young Brown—a mere stripling but eighteen years of age—without a moment's hesitation steps forward and carries on, only to fall at the edge of the trench. Does this stripling—the bloom of youth still fresh on his cheeks and the aura of Princeton or Harvard yet around him—when he reels from the blow of the shell and realizes that his race is almost run, stop to cry out for aid? No, he is made of sterner stuff. With a final effort he cries out, "Sergeant, take command; I'm done for. Carry on!" And so the grizzled Sergeant, veteran of many years of war, carries on to final victory.

There is being published by the Red Cross society at Washington, today, a little magazine on the reconstruction of disabled soldiers and sailors, which is edited by the office of the Surgeon General U. S. Army, and entitled, "Carry On." Among the contributors in the August number, from which this introduction is clipped, are President Wilson, Theodore Roosevelt and Chas. M. Schwab. The object of the magazine—which is nicely illustrated, —is to encourage wounded American soldiers to learn some trade. As soon as they get out of the hospital.

This problem—with which the nations of the old world have been struggling for the past four years—is with us today, demanding prompt and intelligent solution. While it is true that our government has made liberal provisions for the care and support of our wounded soldiers and sailors, it is also true that manhood and independence are priceless blessings which no man can afford to sacrifice, however much of a hero he may have been. "Not charity, —but a charm," is the slogan adopted, and vocational training of some kind, for all crippled men, is strongly urged.

This plan is already in operation in France and England, and every man dismissed from a hospital, who is permanently disabled, is given an opportunity for a course of training which will and is making him self supporting. It is said that about half of them improve the opportunity.

John Galsworthy, the noted English writer, has this to say about the British soldier:

"We have to convince the disabled that, to be re-educated not only physically but professionally, is absolutely essential to them, against a future which, fat enough for the moment, is going in a few years' time to be very lean and hard; and for men handicapped as they will be, simply impossible except for charity, which one imagines is the last thing they want."

"It can't be said too often that the situation while the war lasts is utterly misleading. All civilians now feel grateful and want to pet and serve the wounded soldier. Labor is hard to find, so that anyone—even the handicapped—can get a job."

"All that will have gone by the time the war has been from five to ten years in its grave. Most of our disabled soldiers have thirty, forty, or fifty years before them. The man who slips his chance now, and trusts to luck and gratitude, will find himself on a bench where he will get more kicks than ha' pence, ten years hence."

What is true of Britain is true of America. The great majority of our soldiers today are boys and young men, many of them may return disabled, but a wound is not a disease, and frequently does not shorten life. The kindest thing and the only right thing for the country to do, for these men, is to follow the example of France and England, where an army of disabled men is today in evidence. The soldier honorably discharged, is always a hero, but time cools enthusiasm, and sentiment is none too permanent.

The loss of a leg or an arm, does not usually affect the mind, and the brain continues to function with old time regularity. The demand for brain power is great today, and it will be greater after the war. Here is what Charles C. Schwab says about it in the magazine referred to:

"If there is one thing today that American industry is searching for harder than anything else, it is brains. For thirty-three years my life has been spent among workmen in what has become the biggest branch of American industry, the steel business. But it doesn't make any difference what field of industry you consider, the test of success is the same."

"In the present crisis, leaders of various businesses are engaged in work that is necessary to the winning of the war, and yet wherever in the country's service they happen to be placed, the basis of efficiency remains unchanged. It is brains—specialized brains."

"My present experience in the building of ships proves this daily. The man who can drive more rivets than his fellow succeeds not because he is physically stronger, but because he knows how to utilize his brains, and how to direct his energy."

"There used to be a good deal of nonsensical talk in this country about men who miss fire because they lack genius. Genius is principally hard work; using normal brains to think beyond the manifest daily duty. It supplies one of the readiest alibis for the man who doesn't want to work a little harder than he is compelled to."

Mr. Schwab is good authority. He is now engaged in a man's job, and since he took hold of it there has been no complaint about delay in ship building. Mr. Schwab started life with a good pair of hands and an active brain and soon discovered that the latter was the best equipment he possessed. Many of our disabled soldiers will find that the brain can be cultivated to good advantage.

This new philanthropy is prompted by the "Carry On" spirit, for the work of the world can not stop, however badly its forces may be depleted, or its workers crippled. When our boys come back from "over there" they will bring with them a warm heart and an active brain. If maimed in body it will be worth everything to them to know that a place has been found for them in the ranks of workers, and that they are able to fill it and "Carry On."

There is a demand today for all kinds of labor. This demand will be intensified when the war is over, for we are passing through an era of destruction, such as the world has ever known, and it is so much easier to destroy than it is to restore, that for many years to come, every energy will be bent to the work of restoration.

The new phrase, "Carry On"—coined by the British—is based on a principle as old as time. An All-Wise Creator planned that there should be no break in the generations, as they come and go, and so the old workers drop out, and new ones take their places without friction.

When President Lincoln was assassinated, a wave of depression, as well as sorrow swept over the land. The clock of time seemed to stand still for a moment and faint hearts were filled with fear and apprehension, until Garfield, addressing an excited mob in Wall Street, dispersed the crowd, and quieted nerves on edge, by the statement which rang out over the land, "God is in His heavens," "and the Nation still lives." Then the people took heart and the work of the great Emancipator was "Carried On."

The nation prevails in the minds of some people, that when they let go, the work on which they are engaged will stop, but if the work is important this seldom happens. Someone comes to the front and "Carries On." There are some vacancies of course which are very different to fill. When the mother passes on prematurely the little brood of children suffer a disstructure loss, and when the bread winner falls out of the ranks, his loss is severely felt, yet the whirling of time brings order out of chaos, and the world moves on.

Speaking with a friend in Beloit whose boy is in the signal service, stringing telephone wires in No Man's Land, he said, "I had a letter today from the lad which told about the shells bursting uncomfortably close, but he is an American boy, and with his comrades will carry on to the last ditch." That's the spirit of 1918. Our boys have it at the front, and the nation is imbued with it. The spirit that will win in God's good time, and the generations to come will bless us because we "Carried On."

Fear God

By REV. J. H. RALSTON, D. D.,
Secretary of Correspondence Department,
Moody Bible Institute, Chicago

TEXT—Fear him which after he hath killed hath power to cast into hell. I say unto you, fear ye him.

Quite a notable book was written by former President Roosevelt entitled, "Fear God and Take Your Own Part." A part of the influence of the book has been to increase respect for God, whatever may have been its influence as to man's fellowmen. It brings before men the motive that has not had emphasis in recent years.

As we study this history of motive to right action, we find that sometimes it is gratitude, sometimes love, sometimes duty, sometimes prudence, sometimes recognition of man's sonship to God; but here comes the motive of fear, and in these days when men's hearts are falling from fear, it is a motive that should receive some consideration without impatience. Some of the motives referred to above, and which seem to have made the motive of fear for a long time almost obsolete, have according to the judgment of many gone into the discard. As we find certain theories as to mankind in its closer brotherhood and assumed sonship to God being great delusions, we may ask whether, after all, the motive of fear may yet have an occasion for use.

In many American communities vice today is rampant, unchecked, and such communities are living in terror. Why? because the vicious element have no fear of being punished, the action of the courts and juries in the past showing that there is little likelihood that a person, if he assumes a proper attitude during trial or appeals to the sympathy of the public and the jury, will have to suffer. It is simply a matter of record that where there is this lack of fear vice flourishes.

Should We Fear God?

Let it be fully considered at once that the fear of the Lord as presented in the Scriptures is not chiefly an emotion produced by threatened evils, but rather reverence of God and as a motive it should operate along the lines of respect for God because he is holy and reverent. The fear of pain connected with losing the favor or friendship of God is in place, too, but the moment that is admitted there is admission of fear of another kind—fear as it is defined, "an emotion excited by threatening evil or impending pain, accompanied by a desire to avoid or escape it." There is a place for this kind of fear of God in connection with religious experience, and that motive should have more recognition than in the past. Why is this so?

First, because God is back of every law, the violation of which brings suffering or pain. Law does not operate automatically. No evil resulting from violated law is a blind thing; it is the result of infinite wisdom and intelligent provision. God is behind every law.

Secondly, there are the clearest teachings in the Word of God that evil will be punished by God. From the moment it was said: "In the day thou eatest thereof, thou shalt surely die," to the present moment, sin has been punished. It is specifically said: "The Lord shall reward the doer of evil according to his wickedness." "The face of the Lord is against them who, do evil, to cut off the remembrance of them from the earth." God says, "I will punish the world for their evil and the wicked for their iniquities." "I myself will fight against thee with an outstretched hand, and with a strong arm, even in anger and in great wrath." Several of the parables of the New Testament teach the retributive wrath of God. It is God the Judge who will say in the great judgment day: "Depart from me ye that work in iniquity."

And, thirdly, the thought should be carried to the hereafter. Men are facing the hereafter these days as not before. More people have died in the last three years than any three years preceding, possibly excepting some periods in the history of the world in a time of pestilence. Millions are slain on the battlefield, other millions die in war-stricken countries by starvation, and other hundreds of thousands suffer violent death. What of the future world as we contemplate the multitudes sweeping into it?

No Apology for "Hell."

When Jesus was speaking to his disciples he did not make any apology when he said "hell." He meant the abode of the wicked in the other world. The disciples were to fear the God who could cast both body and soul into hell, but they were not to fear man, who could only kill the body.

The burning city of destruction was a good place to leave, and Bunyan's pilgrim left it as rapidly as he could. We might ask, "Who in these days fears the pain and hopelessness of hell?" But the great fact is, hell remains, and the Word of God is plain as to those who will fall into it.

BATT. SCOUT OFFICER

Former Member of Co. L of Beloit Transferred to Co. D and Appointed Battalion Scout Officer.

Lieut. George G. Gerald of Co. D, 127th Infantry, a former Jansville boy has made the supreme sacrifice "Somewhere in France." Lieut. Gerald died from wounds received in action. His home is in Beloit and he is the first Beloit boy to be killed in France.

Lieut. Gerald lived in this city for many years prior to his moving to Beloit. He was a former member of Co. L of Beloit, having enlisted with them when they were first organized. He went to the border with the company when the Mexican trouble broke out.

After receiving his commission he was transferred to Co. D and made battalion scout officer. He has two brothers in France, Charles and Arno. In a letter written to his folks before his death he told of meeting both his brothers while he was coming out of the front line trenches. Lieut. Gerald enlisted in Company L of Beloit in 1913 and was soon afterwards promoted to the rank of corporal. He won the reputation of being among the finest scouts in the organization and later was promoted to a sergeantcy, a warrant he held for more than two years. He left this city with the company in that capacity but was given a commission on the border shortly before the regiment left for overseas. He was commissioned when only slightly more than 21. He had been on active service in France ever since February of this year.

The officer was born in Sheboygan, Wisconsin, July 28, 1896, and was twenty-two years of age when killed. He lived with his parents in Sheboygan until they moved to this city before moving to Beloit. He was an employee of the Fairbanks-Morse plant in Beloit and was a member of St. Jude's church.

He is survived by his parents, Mr. and Mrs. George M. Gerald, and two sisters, Doris and Geraldine, and four brothers, Earl and Harold of Beloit and Arno A. and Charles J. of Company L.

RED CROSS WORK MUST BE FINISHED BEFORE SEPT. 1ST

Local Chapter Must Fill Present Quotas of Supplies By the Last Day of the Present Month.

I. F. Wortendyke, chairman of the local chapter of the American Red Cross, issued a statement today in which he urges people who are working on Red Cross supplies, to rush the work along so that everything may be turned in before September 1st. His statement follows:

The quotas that have assigned to the Jansville Chapter for completion by August 31, are:

Women's Hospital Drawers, 208, completed.

Men's Hospital Drawers, 81, almost completed.

Conscientious robes, 166, almost completed.

Women's petticoats, 208, completed.

Boys' blue suits, 210, half done (work delayed by lack of material).

Summer pajamas, (gingham), 41, completed.

Boys' undershirts, 366, just begun.

Boys' undershirts, 366, just begun.

Women's morning blouses, 20, not begun.

Stocks, 4160 pairs, 600 pairs shipped, about 650 pairs ready to ship, if all yarn given is knitted and returned by August 30th, this quota will be filled.

Helmetts, army, 168, not all yarn turned in.

Wristlets, 176 pairs, all sent.

In order that this work may be finished by the date set, it is going to be necessary for many to deny themselves some pleasure and work in earnest. I know that we are not going to let the date pass without a sea to fight for us and not do all that we can to provide them with whatever may add to their comfort, and comfort means higher efficiency.

It is no light adventure that we have taken our utmost energy and put it to a successful issue.

It is going to be our reward, when peace again comes, to feel that we gave ourselves the time of our lives, the best under God's blue sky, let us be eager to serve in whatever way we may, putting away personal pride or prejudice and working singly for the winning of this war.

Back From France

First Lieutenant Leon Ellingson of Edgerton, the first of the Rock County soldiers to return home on a furlough from foreign service, has just finished a visit with his parents at Edgerton, and is now en route for Camp Pike, located near Little Rock, Ark., where he will enter the officers' training school, as an instructor.

Lieut. Ellingson left Rock County as a sergeant in what was known as the Edgerton platoon, in August of 1917. He received his commission as second lieutenant at Waco, Texas, after having passed a most severe examination. Later his work showed marked improvement and he was recommended for a first lieutenancy by Captain E. N. Caldwell, commander of Company M of the 128th Inf., and received this commission shortly after arriving in France.

He has served one term in the trenches and was on his second tour of duty when ordered, on two hours' notice, to start for the United States. He brought messages of good cheer and tales of the worth and value of the Rock County boys, he commands, to all parents and friends, and during his brief stay at home found time to visit the majority of the mothers and fathers.

Lieut. Ellingson is still with Company M, of the 128th Inf., as is Elmer M. Wood, who also went out from Rock County. Lieut. Pelton and the majority of the non-commissioned staff of the former Jansville company.

COMMUNITY SERVICE WORKER WILL COME HERE FOR ADDRESS

Mary Wood Hinman, Noted for War Camp Community Service Work, to Speak Here on August 20.

Mary Wood Hinman, noted throughout the Middle West for her work in connection with war camp community service, will speak in Jansville next Tuesday evening, August 20, at Liberty hall. Mrs. Hinman comes here under the auspices of the local soldiers' entertainment committee, with a message on community service for our soldiers and sailors.

Mary Wood Hinman is a member of the War Recreation board of Illinois, with headquarters in Chicago, which has charge of the war camp community service in that state. She is at present on a tour of Wisconsin, and has done a great deal of work in arousing interest in many cities in community service for enlisted men.

Notable results have been accomplished near the front lines, and through her efforts more attention is being paid in nearby cities to the entertainment of the soldiers from camp. The speaker will arrive here on Monday from Tomah.

The address Tuesday night should be largely attended because of the problems which have arisen here in connection with the entertainment of our Grant soldiers. Plans will probably be formed for further work along this line here, following out the work being done by the rest room committee.

Resume of Moving Picture Programs Of Last Week

(By Mrs. Abbie Helms.)

A curious coincidence was noted last week when a film and the circus were in Janesville on the same day. It gave one a thrill to see the act of the trained lions preceded by the lion tamer and surrounded with people and scenery of the show, given as a background for a play. The picture was called "The Greatest Show On Earth" and was seen at the Beverly on Friday. And another coincidence was noted when the picture was shown in which Viola Dana had a comedy part to play. She was an athletic young woman and succeeded into a predicament in her brother's clothes. She was brought to the apartment of a young man who was obsessed by the idea of giving the supposed lady a chance for an opportunity in life. How she succeeded in getting away after eluding the well meant efforts of her maid, and the jealousy of a neighbor's wife, let alone the suspicion of a would-be detective, makes up the story. Funny situations and clever acting made up an enjoyable play.

"Old Wives for New" on Tuesday and Wednesday, contains some original hints in view of the method of retaining the love of their husbands. The answer would be to not get fat, shiftless and untidy and let the housework go, or your husband will just look at you and seek diversion elsewhere. A rather sordid theme, but put on with restraint and beauty.

A very good patriotic play at the Majestic was featured on Sunday and Monday in "Joan of Plattsburg." Joan of Plattsburg was supposed to be an ignorant slave in an orphan asylum. She is helped by an American soldier, who gives her the story of Joan of Arc. She is enamored with the tale, and later when she hears "Joan's" story she runs to the officer who has been her friend. She is helped by the plans of the enemy are broken. She is taken to the mother of the officer, where she has a chance for schooling, and later, when the soldier returns, she is there to welcome him.

"By Night of Purchase" later in the week, has Norma Palladino in the stellar role. She is persuaded to marry a man she does not love, that her mother's debts may be paid. Caught at sea and other picturesque scenes follow the wedding. A former sweetheart gets money from her, which complicates matters with her husband and throws suspicion upon her. But in the end she is won by his kindness and care. She wears some pretty gowns and does the wisest thing she can.

"The play 'The Girl With the Kaiser' at the Apollo, is really much better than its title would lead one to expect. It begins back of the reign of the present Kaiser, when a missing paper brought by an English woman gives that nation a inkling of the preparations Germany was making for war. The story takes up the part of an American inventor, who is a genius, and that of his two daughters. One of the daughters at school in a convent in Belgium, is killed in the invasion. The other daughter, who is studying out the plans of the German emperor and of the crown prince. A clever feature is when the double of the emperor, who poses as him on the American inventor, is arrested at the prison and slaps him for his impudence. A new wireless is the invention.

One of the father aid the emperor is trying to get it from him. Once, when he thought he had the plan, it turns out to be an American flag that has been given him. The emperor is supposed to be driven mad in the last scene, and is the spot of the emperor's soldiers. A very good patriotic picture.

WHO'S WHO in the Dax News

SENATOR KNUTE NELSON
Senator Knute Nelson of Minnesota went to Washington for the Forty-eighth congress (Uncle Joe Cannon had then been a member of the lower house for ten years), and was re-elected for six consecutive years. He was made governor of Minnesota in 1892 and re-elected in 1914. He came to the United States senate in 1895, there he is today at the age of 75 standing for re-election for another term of six years, because his term expires in March 1919.

"They're used to me," he said once when speaking of his long, continuous service. "I always thought when I was 70 years old I'd retire from public life. It seemed a good and appropriate time. I was rounding out the three-score and ten span—just a fairly good time to slip off the political harness, but I suppose I was overpersuaded."

Senator Nelson has the attitude of a man who stands upon a little eminence or at some point detached from the crowd and looks back upon himself. "Looking back over the years, events seem almost unreal—like vivid dreams or things that I might be reading of some one else."

Senator Nelson is not known for his much speaking in the senate. He is a hard worker, however, and a constant attendant upon every session. Work is the senator's slogan. "I don't know what I'd do," he said once, "if I didn't have work. Of course I've worked all my life, and I tell you work is a great thing. I say to young men, work. And always do more than your stint. Don't do exactly what you absolutely have to, but do a bit more—and prove that you are necessary."

When Senator Nelson does say things in the senate some one in the press gets to say he is a "Viking" leader of the Northwest and to say that "he broke loose." That is not because he tears around the senate and waves his arms and gets very red in the face. On the contrary, the venerable senator from Minnesota is dignified, and with a concise force in his manner of speech that is conservative of the old school—the plainness of the old school—the plainness that is not eloquence or oratory.

Senator Nelson thoroughly likes debate, too, and is not averse to lively "interference" if the occasion seems to require the word in season, even if it does nothing more than start something.

MEMORIES OF WESTERN MINING CAMP LIFE ARE REVEALED IN COURT CASE

Missoula, Mont., Aug. 17.—Filing of a suit for annulment of marriage by "Bennie" Bowls against Kathryn Bowls has brought back to Missoula the memories of the mining camps of the days when this section was the "farthest west," and of a nature similar to the "west" that is shown today on the moving picture screens.

Bennie Bowls is a nephew of "Mother" Mary Gleim, and his suit, aside from asking annulment of his marriage, also seeks to restrain Kathryn from collecting $32,500 monthly alimony awarded her in a suit for separation. Bowls alleges that Kathryn, when she married him, was the wife of James F. Somers, a miner.

Bowls is well to do, being inheritor of the estate of "Mother" Gleim, former owner of the "line" in Missoula, where miners paid for their drinks from pokes of dust and where the old western underworld waxed gay at night and slept it off by day.

Incidental to the suit testimony is being offered as to "Mother" Gleim's peculiarities. She was well educated, spoke half a dozen languages and for a hobby studied classic Latin, of which it is said she knew more than even the Supreme Court judges. One of her bids for fame was made when she had a knock-down and drag-out fight with a Catholic missionary over the pronunciation of a Latin phrase. She was also noted as a smuggler in the early days, and is said to have operated an "underground" route for Chinese immigrants from Canada over the border.

Great Griffith Film Draws Milwaukee Crowds

All theatrical records of Wisconsin for length of stay, except that of "The Birth of a Nation," have been surpassed by D. W. Griffith's latest and most wonderful production, "Hearts of the World," which is now entering upon its fourth consecutive week at the Davidson. And, while "Hearts of the World" has not as yet attained as long a run as did the earlier Griffith success, its attendance record thus far has been greater than that of "The Birth of a Nation."

The enthusiasm with which the tremendous audiences have greeted this love story of the great war is in itself a demonstration of the fact that "Hearts of the World" is Griffith's greatest work. When a staid Milwaukee audience will so far forget itself as to come out of its seats and stand cheering the inspiring scenes displayed on the screen, the production must possess qualities not often found. And this occurs at every performance. Tears follow cheers and laughter follows tears so rapidly that the audience is carried throughout the two and a half hours of the entertainment on the wings of complete illusion, living with the hero and heroine and with the humbler ones of the picture, sharing the joys and sorrows, the grim

"You ought to see the American kids parading by. Some eighteen-year-old American will come picking up the road, chasing four or five 'squareheads' (Germans), and the kid is all smiles when he tells how the whole snarl of Huns were on their knees holding 'kammerad.' ## News Notes from Movieland

—BY DAISY DEAN—

Olga Petrova is to quit the screen. Perhaps she will not forsake it entirely, but at least she has disbanded her company and will not face the camera again for some months. Her present contract has but one more week to run and she can scarcely be made to appear in that space of time. "The Russian Woman" will be her last picture.

At present she is resting at her home in Great Neck, N. Y., and she says that her plans for the future are rather uncertain. She expects, however, to return to the speaking stage in the fall.

"For some time I have wanted to return to the stage," she says. "I have only been waiting until I found a suitable vehicle. 'The High Altar' which I wrote in collaboration with W. L. Roberts is the play which I have finally decided will be the best."

Roberts is an English author and the Russian actress thinks that it was an excellent idea for her to share the authorship of her starring vehicle. "The Russian Woman" has definite ideas as to her own kind of plays and although no contract for the present season has yet been signed she is not worried.

"I will take out my own company," she explained, "if no manager will come to my terms. I have confidence in my play and I want to put it as I believe it should be staged, and so I shall do it myself."

Mrs. Petrova had a long and varied career before entering the picture stage. She was born in Vienna, Poland, and was educated in Brussels, Paris and London. She has been on the stage since she was a mere girl of twenty. She played tragedy for some time in this country, then entered vaudeville and finally the silent drama. She has played for Metro, Lasky-Paramount, returning to Metro for a short stay and then headed by a company which is about to disband.

Just a word more about this actress' appearance to ward off the many queries. She has red hair and green eyes and it seems a shame that such a striking combination cannot be recorded on the screen.

The New Draft'll Get 'Em.
White father and brother are worrying about whether their favorite sonpaw is going to beat it to the shipyards or to the front. The army and navy and sister can do a little worrying of their own.

Think what might happen now that the age limit has been expanded to include men. The war would have to go and the bad man of the screen, Bill

Mme. Olga Petrova

Mark. Both of these men long ago expressed willingness to enlist and perhaps now they may have a chance. Others whom the ruling would effect are Bill Desmond, Lou Costello, Charles Clary, Elliott Dexter, and a great number of others. This ruling would also bring D. W. Griffith within the draft age, but of course the master producer has already done his bit and is still doing it.

Hardly a man of any prominence in the industry is over 45 years of age except Charles Murray, and he like Griffith, has already done his bit and is ready for more. In fact, the majority of the really big men in the industry have done their bit, and there is hardly one who doesn't sincerely want to "go over the top" in any way the government desires.

CHAPTER II.

Hall laughed and then stood thoughtfully for a few moments, smoking airily, blowing rings. Then he took off his dressing gown, put on his coat, and had turned to his camera when Floide came back.

"There's a desperate old flirt out there to see you, Mr. Bonistelle—Mr. Doremus."

"Doremus?" Hall searched his memory. "What does he look like—a bill collector?"

"No, he's just a nice old man with a side-whisker effect, trimmed with a gold chain in his coat, and he stares at you over the top of his glasses."

Hall sighed. "Well, have him in. I'll settle him."

Mr. Doremus, grave and precise, looked about for a chair, and sat down deliberately. He searched in the inside pocket of his frock coat as he said pompously: "I'm... I took the first opportunity to communicate with you, Mr. Bonistelle. Unluckily, however, I could not get you on the telephone this morning." Still his hand groped in his pocket, like a dog at a woodchuck's hole.

"No?" Hall remarked impatiently. "I suppose I wasn't up."

Doremus brought forth a long envelope. Scarcely he spoke, looking over the tops of the rubber bows: "Mr. Bonistelle, I have the honor of being the attorney for the estate of your uncle, the late John Beasley Bonistelle."

A mental thunderbolt struck the room, and Hall, shocked and frightened, could only gasp: "Er—is there any news about the will, Mr. Doremus? Here, have a cigar!"

Doremus looked up and nodded gravely. "Yes, the will has been found, Mr. Bonistelle, at last!" He tapped the paper in his hand. "It was discovered this morning at eight twenty-seven o'clock. You see I have been prompt, sir."

Hall restrained an overwhelming curiosity. "Where did you find it?" he asked faintly.

"Ah, curious. Most curious. An eccentric man, your uncle, Mr. Bonistelle. It was found in his library. In fact, if you will believe me, between the leaves of his own book—I mean, of course, the one he wrote himself—'Race Suicide and How to Prevent It.' I believe it is called. I have not yet had the pleasure of reading it."

Mr. Doremus stopped, and gave the young man a steady inspection. "I understand that you will be twenty-eight upon the fourth of May, Mr. Bonistelle. Am I correct?"

"Yes, tomorrow, why?"

Mr. Doremus solemnly held up his hand. "Wait!" he commanded. "Let me, before I go through the whole document, read this one clause."

Floide, peeping through the door, was breathlessly listening. Hall was growing white.

"Er—here it is," Mr. Doremus proceeded to read soberly. "'The residue of my estate I leave to my beloved nephew, Hall Cutter Bonistelle, on condition that he is married before he reaches the age of twenty-eight years.'"

"Oh, I knew it! Well, it's all up then—just my luck!"

"If, however, at the beginning of his twenty-eighth birthday he is still unmarried, this residue shall be the property of my beloved cousin, Jonas Hassingbury, as a testimony to our youthful friendship," Mr. Doremus looked up.

Hall was scowling. "Let's see it!" he demanded, and he took the instrument, and read the clause over to himself, while Mr. Doremus' eyes drifted slowly about the apartment. "How much will the residuary legatees receive?" Hall asked weakly.

"Oh, upward of four millions, I expect," said Mr. Doremus with unctuous. "And I lose all that, just because I'm a single man!" Hall dropped, limp and gloomy, into a chair.

Mr. Doremus bowed soberly. "Your uncle held strong views, Mr. Bonistelle. He firmly believed in marriage. He thought it a duty. He maintained high ideals for the future of the race."

"Oh, for heaven's sake!" cried Hall. "I know all about that. Didn't Uncle Joan talk me to death on the subject? Why didn't he get married himself?"

"An unfortunate love-affair, I understand, prevented his putting his own theories into practice," said Doremus. "I think—ah, I do not say so positively—but it is possible that, had you—knowing, you understand, his peculiar theories—"

"Acted accordingly?" said Hall. "Married on the chance of becoming his heir? Bright idea! But it's too late now. Lord!"

"It is, as you say, too late, practically, I presume," Mr. Doremus remarked, "but, legally, I must remind you that the time has not yet expired. You have until midnight, you understand, in which to qualify for the inheritance. Much has been done in fourteen hours, Mr. Bonistelle."

"Fourteen hours!" Hall repeated. "Why, fourteen days would be little enough time. You can't put a thing like marriage through on a time schedule, you know, can you?"

"I confess I do not know," said Mr. Doremus, rising.

Hall sat in a brown study, regarding his boots, as Mr. Doremus prepared to leave. Floide, her eyes bright with excitement, tiptoed back into the office.

Mr. Doremus deposited the paper upon the table. "Well, I shall leave you this copy to inspect at your leisure. You may not be aware that I am a justice of the peace, Mr. Bonistelle. I shall be quite willing to accommodate you, should you find a bride. I think I could perform as creditably a ceremony as any clergyman—at half price!" He chuckled at the idea.

Hall, in no mood for jests, rose and followed him. "Where's Cousin Jonas—Mr. Hassingbury?" he asked. "Lord, he ought to be a happy man, about now!"

Mr. Doremus paused. "I took the first opportunity of telegraphing to Mr. Hassingbury," he said, "informing him of the provisions of J. B. Bonistelle's will. I requested his immediate appearance in town, and I have no doubt that he will arrive here some time during the day."

"Think of that old hypocrite getting all that money!" Hall exclaimed. "Lord it makes me ill—he'll be a thousand times more disgusting than ever, with his religious bosh and his charity talk!"

Mr. Doremus lifted an eloquent finger. "As an executor, you understand I must preserve an attitude of strict impartiality," he admonished. "At the same time, in my private capacity, I confess that I am on the side of youth. Four millions—ah, one could indulge one's youthful dreams!" He shook his head sentimentally. "Si la jeunesse savait, si la vieillesse pouvait!"

Hall watched him, half-amused. "Say, Doremus, you're all right!" Mr. Doremus was looking over his shoulder to get a glimpse of Floide. Hall had an idea. "I say," he suggested, "why not come around here tonight, and we'll have a wake over my lost inheritance. I'm giving a small party, you know, just a few of my clients, and an actress or two."

"Well, well! It might remind me of old times," Mr. Doremus offered his hand. "I think I shall come. It may renew my youth. Ah, Mr. Bonistelle, you might not believe it, but I've waited at the stage door myself, in my time!"

"I'll bet you have, old sport! And got away with it, too," said Hall, laughing. "Come along, then, I'll set them on you!"

"But meanwhile, don't forget that I'm a justice of the peace!" Mr. Doremus gave Hall a poke in the ribs, grinned, bowed and went out, with a youthful smile at Floide as he flourished through the office.

No sooner was the door shut than Hall Bonistelle exploded. "Well, Floide, it's all up! It's back to the farm for mine! Isn't that just my luck!"

A lively hope had blossomed in Floide's heart. She was pale and trepid. "I couldn't quite hear," she answered, dissembling; "what was it?"

"Four and a half million dollars gone to the devil just by a fluke—that's all! By jove, it's an outrage!" Floide stood twisting her hands nervously. "You don't mean you're going to let that—?" Floide stopped just in time; her mind had run away with her lips. "Oh, Mr. Bonistelle, I mean you don't mean that mean old Jonas Hassingbury's going to get that money."

"Yes, confound him! The psalm-singing, holler-than-thou old hypocrite! Four millions, Floide! Think of it! Good Lord, isn't it ferocious? And if that will had only been found when Uncle Joan died—but Lord, what's the use of talking." He walked doggedly back into the studio, and gave a vicious swing to his camera.

Floide followed him in, then stood looking at him pensively. She spoke slowly, softly, deliberately. "Why don't you go ahead and get the money, Mr. Bonistelle?"

"Get the money? How?"

"Why, get married!" Floide turned suddenly crimson.

"Why, who in the world would have me?"

Floide swallowed down a lump in her throat. "Oh," she said, "I'm sure there's some nice girl who'd be so proud to marry you, Mr. Bonistelle!"

"Well, I don't know how I'm to find her—and I've got deuced little time to look. Why, do you realize that I've only got till midnight to do the whole thing in?" He went up to her. "And do you imagine that any woman would want to be married in that way?"

"Oh, when you're in love, it doesn't matter how soon—"

"A hurricane wooing, eh? By jove, I wonder—" He stared at her with a new light in his eyes. "Say, you really think I could get away with it? Why, I never—"

"Oh, you could do anything, Mr. Bonistelle, I'm certain you could!"

"Do you know of any woman who'd have me—that quick?"

Floide tried to speak, hesitated, couldn't. "I—think so—" she finally got out. Then, timidly: "Yes, I'm sure she would!"

"By jove, I'll try it!" he exclaimed. "Who is she?"

Floide almost broke down. She crept up to him timidly. "Why—why, you know, Mr. Bonistelle, don't you?—why, you must know! It's someone—she stopped and swallowed—" someone you see—very often." She couldn't look him in the face, but stood waiting fearfully, trembling.

"Lord, if I could do it!" Hall went on to himself. "Four millions! Before midnight!" He paused, gazing at a corner of the ceiling. "Oh, by jove!" he exclaimed suddenly. "I know now! You mean Rena Royaltan! Why, I never thought of her, before! Of course. Yes, that's a fact! She did call me Hall, the last time I saw her, didn't she?" He turned to Floide. "See here, Floide, you're clever—how the deuce did you know?"

Floide clutched at her heart and bit her lip to keep back the tears. He put it to her direct. "Is it Mrs. Royaltan, Floide?"

Floide's smile was a triumph; it had in it a dozen different meanings, it was wonderful in its beautiful renunciation; but it took a full minute for her to control herself, and, meanwhile, she basted herself with the tray.

"Yes, I'm Sure She Would!"

"Yes," she managed to say finally, and choking, she walked rapidly back into the office.

Hall stood and thought it over. He took out his watch and looked at it anxiously. It was already ten o'clock. Once he shook his head. It was too outrageous; then the humor of the affair seized him and he laughed harshly, aloud.

Floide's white face appeared in the doorway. "What is it?" she cried. "I've got it!" he shouted. "We'll have the wedding tonight. The guests are invited already, and they can't get at the rice. How's that? Won't that be great? Floide Fisher, you've saved my life!"

He grabbed her and whirled her round in a crazy waltz, till she broke away in anguish. "Oh, Mr. Bonistelle," she began, "I'll just have to tell you. I can't bear it—"

At that moment there was a sound of the hall door opening.

"What is it?" Hall said. "Anything I can do for you? Want to be a bridesmaid, or what?"

Floide turned, looked, and saw. "Oh, nothing!" She put her hand to her head, as if it were aching. "There she is, now!" she sighed. "Mrs. Royaltan!"

"Good! Tell her I'll be ready in just a minute!" Hall rushed into the dark room to load his plate-holders.

Floide went wearily into the office with a curt "Good morning, Mrs. Royaltan," and made a brave attempt to smile.

Tales of the Friendly Forest

Let me see. The old stage coach in which Billy Bunny was taking a drive was overturned just as I finished last night's story, but it's all right tonight. Yes, sires. It's back on its four wheels again. And the Billy goat team is prancing along, for this morning Robbie Redbreast flew into my bedroom window just as I was tickling the alarm clock to see why it didn't go off, and told me that he saw it, the stage coach, you know, rolling along on its four wheels just as good as ever, and that the old dog driver had told him that Billy Bunny had gotten out at Carrot and Lettuce streets, where is Uncle Lucky Left-hindfoot lived.

And after he had told me this the little robin flew away. And now I'll tell you some more about the little rabbit.

"Well, as soon as he hopped out of the old stage coach he looked around to see if Uncle Lucky was in the yard, but he wasn't. Neither was the old gentleman rabbit in the hen-coop or on the front porch. So Billy Bunny hopped around to the garage to find him. But the dear old gentleman rabbit wasn't there either.

"Now, where do you suppose Uncle Lucky is?" and the little rabbit looked inside the tool chest and behind the wheelbarrow and under the gasoline barrel. And just then, all of a sudden, a big black snake glided into the garage.

And then Billy Bunny was glad he couldn't find his Uncle Lucky, for if he could he would have told that dreadful black snake couldn't either.

"Oh please don't hurt me," said the little rabbit, for he couldn't get out of the garage, you know, for the snake was standing right in the middle of the doorway.

"Oh, no, I won't hurt you. I'll just give you a nice big squeeze," said the cowardly black snake, and he glided toward the little rabbit.

"Oh, dear, oh, dear, I'm a goner now," and Billy Bunny hopped first to one side and then to the other, till that dreadful snake crawled after him. And pretty soon he got closer and gave him a hiss.

And just as that dreadful snake was going to coil himself all around this poor little bunny what do you suppose happened? You'd never guess so I'll tell you, right away. The big kind Policeman Dog ran in and with his club hit that snake a tremendous whack, and after that the snake said he thought he'd go home. And he did, and then the Policeman Dog began to sing:

Rub-a-dub, dub, just look at my club,
And my uniform of blue.
Whenever I pass with my buttons of brass,
They give me a cheer or two.
I'm a good watchdog, a Policeman Dog,
Looking after you.

Value of Ripe Olives.
Pound for pound, ripe olives, so far as total value of heat unit is concerned, contain almost as much food value as bread, and in the case of very large olives the value may be increased to approximately the same as that of bread.

Dinner Stories

Voice (from the patrol box)—Is the station in sight yet, officer?

Policeman (smiling)—Not yet, your vagrancy.

Voice—How exasperating! It's so hard to engage a really efficient chauffeur nowadays!

"Say, mister, what do they give you at the probate court when you go over there to get married?" It was a woman who asked the question and the man at police headquarters at the other end of the telephone line hesitated a moment. "Why, why—a marriage license, I suppose," he replied.

There was another pause, this time at the woman's end of the line. Then she added:

"Well, that may be, but I guess they got it twisted this time. I think you must have given my husband a liquor license when we got married four months ago, because he hasn't been sober one day since."

"He's perfectly quiet," remarked the jobmaster to the two ladies who were about to hire a pony and trap. "Only you must take care to keep the rein off his tail."

When they returned the jobmaster inquired how they got on.

"Splendidly!" they exclaimed. "We had one rather sharp shower, but we took turns holding the umbrella over his tail, so there was no real danger."

"Geat. Where have you been buried all this time?" exclaimed Claudine of the rapid-fire restaurant. "No German fried potatoes go here any more—American fry now."

"Cut out the puffer!" snarled the guest with the flat-topped head. "I want what I order. See?"

"All right!" responded the young lady. Then to the chef she called: "Here, Buddy! One order fried potatoes with ground glass in 'em!"

NEW PUBLICATION ISSUED BY BOARD

Boston, Aug. 17.—The United States Shipping Board has begun publication of a weekly journal as an aid to its campaign to recruit men for service on America's new merchant marine, called "The Merchant Marine" and with Edwin Reynolds, formerly a newspaper man in Boston and now a special agent of the Shipping Board, as managing editor, this service newspaper is designed not alone to convey merchant marine news to the men already enrolled, but to attract to this sea trade 85,000 others to man the cargo carriers recently launched or under construction.

"The Merchant Marine" announces that the Steamship President, recently acquired for the use of the Shipping Board's recruiting service as a station ship, is the tenth vessel to enter this training fleet. Apprentices enlisting from all parts of the country, the paper explains, and the president, after being recruited, will accommodate these newcomers. The activities of all the ships of this fleet are placed before the public so that the progress of this branch of the Shipping Board's work may be observed.

Late in July the enrollments had passed the 15,000 mark, with Massachusetts leading with 3,198, New York second with 1,856, Pennsylvania third with 900, and Ohio fourth with 820.

"Enrolling has not struck its stride in all the states as yet," the publication announces, "and the figures of the near future, with possible frequent changes in the relative standing of the leading states. Recruits are now being accepted on the training vessels at the rate of 80 to 100 a day."

Buy Next Summer's Cadillac Now

Buy now—because the Cadillac will not be changed. It has decisively proved itself the finest car obtainable.

Buy now—because you will save money. The price may easily be several hundred dollars higher next spring.

Buy now—because government requirements are consuming more and more of Cadillac capacity. If you wait till next spring, a Cadillac may be unobtainable.

Buy now—because repairs to old cars are becoming more difficult and expensive daily. You may find your old car laid up for months for want of a simple part, or labor.

Buy now—because your old car is worth its maximum in trade today. Abolition of certain tire sizes and repair difficulties must soon cut into present inflated used-car prices.

Buy now—and buy a Cadillac—because of its certainty of satisfaction—its enduring service—its freedom from trouble—its remarkable value—its high resale value.

So—buy your next summer's Cadillac now—while you can get it—and enjoy it now.

MORRIS MILLER

Lawn tennis players who have been devoting thought as to the east of the die when the rankings are listed for the season of the United States National Association are inclined to believe that the positions in the honored top ten will depend chiefly upon the showing made on the courts at Southampton and in the national championship tournament. As the records stand now, William T. Tilden, 24, unquestionably has gained the lofty place of No. 1, the position which in other years has been held by such luminaries of the courts as Maurice McLaughlin, R. Norris Williams, 24, William A. Larned, Bob Wrenn and others who have made "America's lawn tennis history."

Tilden, back again in the early part of the season, announced his intention of entering for the national championship singles which the tournament was awarded at Forest Hills. It is not known to have changed that determination. His greatest victories are in the Harlem cup singles, the Western Pennsylvania state championship and the national clay court championship. In all of these he performed so well as to practically outclass the others of the field and this despite the fact that Samuel Hardy and Walter Hays were represented in the clay court competitions.

The only other star who has come out for matches is Ichihy Kikumago, the Japanese whose recent appearance has resulted in walkovers because of there being no one of his class to oppose him. Kikumago kept the national New York state championship through the arrangement of a challenge match in which he defeated his countryman, Seisaku Kashiwa. The only tournament of the recently decided metropolitan championship, in which he did not lose a set on the courts of the Crescent Athletic club at Bay Ridge, and the records stand the appear to represent the most formidable contenders for the honors, as with the exception of Walter Merrill Hall, who won the middle states, the stars have been absent.

Oliver O'Mara, the Robbins' plucky third baseman, earlier had been accused of getting at his head whenever he takes a base hit. To the contrary, the size of Ollie's head appears to diminish a fraction when he hits one in the head. Proof of this is shown when he starts to dash down the baseline to first. Several times this season while running to a base after connecting safely, Ollie has been blown out of his head. In a recent game against the Cardinals, Ollie cracked out a double and after rounding first his cap flew off and he reached the middle base bag headfirst. Another O'Mara made a single and while making a bluff to stretch the blow he lost his headgear and returned to first minus that part of his uniform. "Ed was a hatter, only I might be prompted to 'rob the impress,'" said the player.

Charles Webb Murphy, former owner of the Cubs, has honored the natives of this home town in Wilmington, Ohio, by erecting a beautiful theater. The playhouse, which has been named the Murphy theater, was opened and dedicated recently and will be devoted to feature film pictures. The building cost a quarter of a million dollars and is the gift of Murphy to his home town.

More than 3,000 persons attended the opening ceremonies and the entire receipts, $12,000, was turned over to the Red Cross fund.

Dr. Joseph Raymond, director of athletics in the United States training camp, says lawn tennis is one of the best sports for soldiers and sailors. He recently stated:

"The value of lawn tennis for men may be briefly stated as follows: It gives them a lot of great recreation value. Combined with this—namely a military standpoint—the game would be of value, because it develops quickness of decision, quickness of action, rapid muscular response, body control and balance, and team play to a certain extent. All of the foregoing qualities are very desirable, and most essential to a good soldier, and anything which tends to produce these results will add greatly to the efficiency of our army."

SIDE LIGHTS on the CIRCUS BUSINESS

By D. W. WATT
Former Manager Burr Robbins
and Later Treasurer of Adam Forepaugh Circuses.

The title of the Al. G. Barnes great animal show among show folks for years has been "The circus that is different." Mr. Barnes' earliest ambition in the business was to build up a circus that was different from all others, and like most other showmen, he started in the business when a boy with but little to attract attention from the public, but with one thought in mind and that was to build up a great animal circus, that would be known the world over as the greatest of its kind. With this one object in view he labored for years until finally the show grew to be so that it began to attract the attention, not only of the general public, but showmen the world over as the show that was different. Al. G. Barnes animal circus is acknowledged the leader of its kind in the country.

Although in Janesville he was handicapped by the shortage of laboring men and possibly 50 or 75 boys helped to erect the great canvas and although it was a hard and arduous job, opening his doors, yet when the menagerie and circus tops were up and all the seats to accommodate the public much to the surprise of the audience Mr. Barnes, for the comfort of his guests, had erected revolving fans on poles about ten feet from the entire length of the reserved seats and Al. G. Barnes was the first in the field to have a new idea for the comfort of his patrons which certainly was much appreciated in Janesville.

As many times the case with different shows I met an old friend with the Barnes show known the world over as "Col. Cummings," of wild west fame. Col. Cummings some 15 years ago traveled with one of the best wild shows all over European countries, having with his show 20 different tribes of Indians and about 200 in number. The Colonel was arrested in Russia as a spy while he was a loyal American citizen, but knowing his man with a lot of money, which after a long trial proved to be what they were after as they thought Colonel Cummings was liable to take too much money out of the country. He is a man that furnishes a concert which is largely of the wild west order. This show as a rule makes a much longer season than the large shows that winter quarters are in Venice, Calif., about a dozen miles from Los Angeles, where they opened about the first of April.

When Mr. Barnes arrived in Janesville he received a telegram from my old friend, W. K. Peck, who is the general agent of the show. The telegram was from New Orleans and gave Mr. Barnes something of an idea of the conditions of the southern country for a late run up into the fall which they expect to make. One of the busiest men around the show is the press agent "Thomas Dawson." Mr. Dawson is not only a press agent but in the busiest times sells tickets to the show all kinds of business around the show and when I inquired for him at the grounds in the afternoon one of the employees said that they want to see him in a hurry, just tell someone around the show that you want to see "Skinny Dawson."

I don't think Skinny will have time enough to be put on exhibition as a fat boy for he is certainly one of the busiest men around the show and always on the go. When I asked him how he happened to be in the business he said "I started out with the Barnum show as a clown and while I did not last long as a clown I guess they thought my acting on a clown would occupy the place, but my one ambition was to make good in some position around the show, so Mr. Barnes concluded that I should try at something else—and as this is my

Whitewater News

Whitewater, Aug. 17.—Hon. M. A. Cooper gave an address Thursday evening at the White theater. Mr. Cooper remained here over night, facing many acquaintances, and next morning was taken to Oconomowoc by an auto party consisting of M. Morrissey of Delavan, Judge Ross of Beloit and Mr. Drew of Kaukauna.

Many people went from here to Myron Piper's Thursday evening to attend the ice cream social and platform dance. About $200 was made for the Red Cross society.

fourth year I have at least made good in a way or I would not be here.

The show as a whole was well managed and will be well received should they see fit to visit Janesville again. The show went from here to Monroe where two of the largest houses of the hospital were held. They were packed down to the ring bank after night.

When Mrs. Gertrude West, the "Fat Lady" with the Zedman-Pelle Carniv company, died in St. Mary's hospital, Milwaukee, Tuesday afternoon, hospital authorities and deputies of the county coroner were confronted with a problem of handling her body. Mrs. West, who was 42 years old, weighed 655 pounds. Her death, according to attending physicians was due to fatty degeneration of the heart.

The woman was brought to the hospital early Tuesday afternoon, suffering an infection in the left leg, caused by a mosquito bite.

As the woman died on the third floor of the hospital, two coroners' deputies, Bernard Litza and Walter Zohetner were unable to remove the body. A call was sent to the morgue for aid in handling the body and in opening it. Coroner Henry Grundman and Assistant Coroner Albert Luebke, Byron Seidel and Thomas Klein responded, was it possible to remove the corpse. The coroners, however, had not ended, as it was found that the body was too large for the ice box. It was taken to the autopsy room where it was placed on a large table at Rock Island, Ill.

An incident of unusual interest took place with the Sells-Floto show a short time ago given by Mr. and Mrs. Hobson who celebrated their silver wedding.

Mr. and Mrs. Homer Hobson, the well-known bareback riders with the Sells-Floto Circus, who also present an Indian troupe act in the big show, celebrated their silver wedding anniversary on July 29 at Shenandoah, Ia., and made the members of the big show family happy at supper time. They provided an excellent variety of delicacies, both in quality and quantity, including ice cream and cake, candy and cigars for everyone. They were joined by the circus from general manager down to pony boy, which was duly appreciated by all. At the conclusion of the feast all voted Mr. and Mrs. Hobson "royal" people and extended congratulations and wishes for a long and happy life. They are among the most popular of the Sells-Floto circus family.

"The weather man is not treating us fair. We are certainly having hot weather thru Kansas, writes friends from the 'big show'." Since the Bar-num show hit Illinois, Kansas and Missouri business has been wonderful. At Kansas City business was the biggest in a long time. Folks were seated on straw, and during the races they had to be ushered into the rings to prevent accidents.

At St. Joseph, the next stand, was big; also Atchison and Topeka. At Kansas City many old time show folks paid a visit, including the aerial Uts, Mrs. Bertha Rounds, Raggs Florence and the Florence Troupe, Dan Cahill, Dugger and many others. The writer also entertained many of his clever friends at his home. St. Joseph, Harry Van Possen, of minstrel fame, visited the show. At Topeka the showmen were the main attraction on the streets. The many whiteface comedians sold over $200 worth of W. S. S. Harry Stratton and Fred Branda were the chief instigators. A well dressed man climbed into the cage and named Chas. Carroll to play "Over There." Mr. Carroll did so and as he finished was handed $2.50. This same gentleman did the same thing to the clown band and the big band.

The Matchless Kitchen

Particularly from the standpoint of comfort, convenience and cleanliness in her kitchen equipment, the present day house-wife has much to be thankful for.

Now cookery is being revolutionized by the electric range. The unpleasant and disappointing conditions of the past are supplanted by comfort, cleanliness and convenience. You can do any kind of cooking with the electric range. It is safe, sanitary, simple to operate, sure in results, saving in work and food value, and economical to operate.

Cost of Electric Cooking

The cost will, of course, vary with each family and be at a minimum when the cooking is done by one accustomed to the use of the electric range. The bills for the first month are usually highest because of a tendency on the part of the user to experiment with various devices.

Figures obtained from many customers show that the average family of 4 or 5 persons will consume 100 to 125 kilowatt hours of electric current per month. With cost of current, at our excess rate of 8c per kilowatt hour, the monthly cooking bills would be from $3.00 to $3.75.

A SPECIAL DEMONSTRATION OF THESE RANGES ALL NEXT WEEK AT OUR OFFICE.
